Elizabeth W. Robechek is an award-winning landscape architect and garden designer with international recognition; one of her Santa Fe Gardens was selected by an international jury to be exhibited in Vienna, Austria in 2012 along with 28 other designers from around the world. Important to her work~creating gardens~are the stories of people and place and the transcendent power of the natural world.

Almost 25 years ago, Elizabeth was involved in the beginnings of JACO and participated in many activities while living in Ohio. Over the past several years, Elizabeth has crafted beautifully sculptural artwork books that illuminate our human condition by illustrating wisdom harvested from the botanical world. Her works express both wisdom and whimsy.

GPS~germination power surge presents as a folded paper game you may recall from childhood; it serves to guide the reader on a journey of germination.

Removing My Seed Coat, first in the series, opens accordion-fashion. This work asks readers to consider the question, "How do you remove your seed coat"? Each, interactive book engages the imagination, mind, heart and hands.
