

POSSIBILITIES, PILGRIMAGE AND POIGNANCY: THE JOURNEY OF THE LATER LIFE YEARS

Presented by John Schuster

FEBRUARY 24 @ 2:00 PM - 4:00 PM EST

Many psychologists, Carl Jung chief among them, and other professionals like spiritual directors and gerontologists, have addressed the psychology of the later-life years. The challenges and opportunities of life beyond the career-centric/family-upbringing years are addressed differently by everyone of us, and there are a host of creative ways to live with vitality and purpose later-in-life. Both the “best” and the “boomer” generations find their journeys laden with new joys and burdens and, above all, opportunities for growth and self-expression that could not present themselves in the busyness of the mid-life years. These joys and burdens comprise the pilgrimage possibilities of the later-life years and will be the topic of this presentation.

John P. (Cunningham) Schuster is an author, executive coach, and teacher who has enjoyed the good fortune of being in business for over thirty years helping leaders be more effective in their multiple roles.

This work has taken many shapes and directions, but often includes the profound and not-so-easy process of assisting clients to tune into the essential person, the original self, that lies underneath all the learning and acquired competencies they have acquired on their leadership journey.
